

Detail Itinerary

Mount Annapurna 1st (8091m) is the tenth world highest peak and it is one of the most dangerous mountains to climb. In the 1950s, a large French group had dreamed to climb via Annapurna North Base Camp, as a result of which the approach to Annapurna was explored, and two of them participants, Louis Laschennal and Maurice Erzog, managed to climb to the top. North Annapurna Base Camp is a wild trekking in Nepal Himalayan. The trek of the north Base camp of Annapurna starts from Lete (high way trail of full version Annapurna circuit, between Tatopani and Jomsom). It is a camping trekking with well prepared.

Annapurna Base Camp trail separated from Lete and it takes 6 to 7 days, maybe 5 days (Lete to Lete) but in a hurry (both way, up and down). We suggest the much better trek to Muktinath for well acclimatization then North Annapurna Base Camp. The whole route is passable in good weather without special equipment - many domestic people go there while looking for Yarsgumba. There are only two difficult places - the crossing Miristi Khola (the bridge there is seasonal - if there is no bridge its trouble) and one steep place near the pass. So, regarding the bridge, we need to prepare well. The route is used only to the Annapurna Expedition groups and the North base camp few trekkers only. This is why we as a reliable and services oriented trekking agency suggest you organize your trip to Annapurna north base camp from trekking agency with highly experience trekking staffs.

You can see a massif Mt Dhaulagiri, Nilgiri, Tilicho peak, and Annapurna. The Tilicho Peak is visually seen like a hero steeply standing wall just next to your nose. Behind the moraine hills, you can see incredible sky blue color lakes. The Annapurna North Base Camp trek is fully naturally wild through gorges. This trekking brings you up to pass 4300 m (approx) and the Base Camp is based at an altitude 4200m (approx).

Trip Facts

Detail Itinerary

Cost Includes

Cost Excludes